'ie' and 'ei'

John and his friend couldn't wait to go to the shop. When they got there, they remembered they had left their money at home. It was inconceivable that they would become thieves, especially as they knew the chief of police and he wouldn't be lenient with them. As they were about to leave, they recognised their neighbour across the shop who offered to lend them eighty pounds so they could pay for food and diesel. They made sure to keep the receipt so they could prove they had used the money as promised.

While all of this was happening, John's niece was at school learning about onomatopoeia before having science and orienteering in the afternoon. She didn't have many achievements at school as she was often too busy day dreaming about adventures in a far off foreign land.
